Spring Adventure Camp 2027

Mini Marketing Campaign

Ferguson Outdoor Learning Center

1. Audience + Messaging Strategy

Primary audience

- Primary audience are parents and guardians of children that are around the ages of 4 to 12. This will include families that are looking for a safe, engaging and also an educational opportunity for their children during the break. I would also second that the audience includes families who are already interested in the outdoor learning program and have experienced the wildlife and hands-on learning that takes place.

What are parents looking for

- Keeping their children active and safe while being able to engage in outdoor learning activities while being out of school
- Provides a safe and supervised environment
- Offers more than a regular childcare program but includes meaningful experiences and gets children away from screens so they can be outdoor

Needs the camp addresses

- Spring venture camp provides parents with a structured option for their children during the break and gives campers an opportunity to explore and learn about being outdoors. Rather than just spending the week primarily indoors and on screens the campers can actually explore nature first hand through various activities.

What makes Ferguson Different

- Ferguson outdoor learning center has an advantage simply because of the location itselfIs a part of the experience. Simply because the location is atThe farmhouse the campers are simply just intending activitiesThey are having access to woods, working farm environments and activities that are also led by Ferguson year-round With their educators that are tailored for the campers in those age ranges

Key marketing messages

1. Adventure doesn't have to wait until summer
2. Get us outside in discover something
3. Less screen time and more adventure
4. Learning that feels like an adventure
5. A spring break that parents and the kids can feel good about

2. Competitors research

1. Nature Forward — Spring Break Camp - Nature Forward

Location: Woodend Sanctuary, Chevy Chase, MD
2027 Dates: March 29–April 2
Grades: K–5
Price: $545 members / $595 nonmembers
Hours: 8:45 AM–3 PM; extended care available.

Nature Forward emphasizes experiencing spring firsthand. What this looks like is catching frogs, hiking,and exploring spring flowers.

What they do well: Their marketing gives parents strong examples of what the children will actually experience instead of simply describing the program as a "nature camp."

Opportunity for Ferguson: Using similarly specific activities in social media. For example, dip netting, exploring wetlands, gardening, wildlife discoveries, and visiting the riverbank. This will help parents visualize the experience.

2. Lure of the Wild Nature Camps - Lure of the Wild

Location: Catonsville, MD
2027 Dates: March 22–26 and March 29–April 2
Ages: 4–13

Price: $565/week or $135/day
Hours: 9 AM–4 PM with extended care available.

Their positioning goes beyond outdoor activities. They promote camp as helping children develop confidence, character, and creativity,All of this takes place in an outdoor environment. Their website also prominently features parent and camper testimonials.

What they do well: What they do well is they sell the benefit to the child and not only the activities.

Opportunity for Ferguson: The marketing can combine what campers do with what they gain. Such as community, confidence and connection with nature, and also the new experience.

3. Casey Trees — Green Guardians - Casey Trees

Location: Washington, DC
2026 Spring Break: April 13–17
Grades: 4–5
Price: $250
Hours: 9 AM–3 PM.

Casey Trees combines outdoor recreation with environmental education. Activities include science experiments, nature exploration, urban forestry, watershed education, and a field trip. Their 2026 spring program sold out.

What they do well: They communicate the educational value of camp while still making the experience sound active and fun.

Opportunity for Ferguson: We need to highlight the combination of fun + environmental and learning, this is because of the access to multiple natural environments on one property which stands out.

4. Mary's Land Camp - Mary's Land Camp

Location: Ellicott City, MD
2027 Spring Break: March 22–25
Ages: 4–12
Price: $415
Hours: 9 AM–4 PM.

Mary's Land promotes a lot of outdoor adventure, gardening, and farm experiences. I believe that this emphasizes giving children a break from the classroom and an opportunity to connect with nature and make friends.

What they do well: Their message is very simple and parent-friendly, they don't try to overcomplicate anything

Opportunity for Ferguson: We can use a similarly simple message while emphasizing its distinctive combination of farm + forest + wetlands + Potomac River.

Key Marketing Takeaways

1. Show the experience instead of only advertising the camp.
Making sure that the Photos and Reels should show campers actively exploring, discovering wildlife, gardening, getting muddy, investigating the river, and interacting with nature.

2. Market to parents, but make the experience exciting for kids.
Parents need practical reasons to register and the visuals should make children think, "I want to do that."

3. Emphasize Ferguson's location.
The combination of the farm, forest, and overall wildlife makes a huge difference and already stands out to emphasizing that will be important

4. Promote early and create urgency.
Competitors already have 2027 information available or registration timelines established. Ferguson's current page says to stay tuned for 2027 dates, so awareness content can begin before registration even opens

5. Use previous camp content as proof.
Real photos and videos from Summer Adventure Camp can show parents what a Ferguson camp actually looks and feels like.
